

Jacob Goes to Haran

Scripture Reference:
Genesis 27:41-33:20

Suggested Emphasis or Theme:

Sometimes, we learn lessons from bad things that happen to us.

Memory Verse: And we know that in all things, God works for the good of those who love him, who have been called according to his purpose. Romans 8:28, ICB

Story Overview:

Having deceived his brother and father, Jacob escaped to relatives in Haran. During the journey, Jacob dreamed of a stairway between heaven and earth on which angels were ascending and descending to the Lord at the top. God reassured Jacob of his blessing and promise. Undeserving as he was, this promise sustained Jacob over the next twenty years as he worked for his uncle Laban and built a family and wealth. Eventually, Jacob returned to his home and was surprised to find that his brother, Esau, welcomed him with open arms.

Background Study:

In the lesson Jacob, Esau and the Birthright, we were first introduced to the character of Jacob. He had lived a life filled with jealousy and deception that culminated in him stealing his brother's expected position as leader of the family. Even as Jacob moves away to escape retribution, trickery seems to shadow each step.

Our natural reaction to Jacob's story might be that he does not deserve to receive God's blessing and protection. The story of Jacob, however, reminds us that God's plans are not dependent on man's behaviour. After all, NONE of us deserves to represent God in any of the ways that he asks us to. The people of God are not perfect heroes, and children should not be under the impression that they are. Instead, human imperfection is the backdrop of God's perfection and amazing work.

This lesson takes up where the story of “Jacob, Esau and the Birthright” left off. After deceiving his father and brother, Jacob leaves his family home and goes north to his mother’s relatives in Haran. The official reason is that he is looking for a wife, but it is evident that he is fleeing the wrath of his brother. In the following years, many important events take place.

1. Jacob Encounters God at Bethel

(Genesis 28:10-22) As Jacob flees from his family in Beersheba, he stops along the way one night to sleep. At this time, he dreams of a stairway stretching from earth to heaven. God is at the top of the ladder, and angels are going up and down it. Here, God restates the blessing he had previously given to Abraham and Isaac. Jacob recognises the magnitude of this promise, builds a pillar there and calls the place “Bethel”.

Jacob also strikes what appears to be a bargain with God. If God takes care of him as he says, then he vows to give God a tenth of what he has. It wasn’t until many, many years later that a “tithe” becomes part of the Mosaic Law (Leviticus 27:30-32).

2. Trickery and Jacob’s Family Life in Haran

(Genesis 29-31) Jacob has always been the one who deceives but once he connects with his family in Haran, he learns what it means to be the recipient of deception. Jacob strikes a bargain to work for his uncle Laban for seven years in exchange for marrying Laban’s beautiful younger daughter, Rachel. Seven years later, Laban switches the bride at the wedding so that Jacob marries his older daughter, Leah, by mistake. Jacob is allowed to marry Rachel, too under the condition he works another seven years.

Bargains, tricks and deception all play a part in the lives of Laban, Jacob and Jacob’s wives. Jacob’s family grows but with much angst and sorrow. His wives are jealous of each other and even bargain over the nights they spend with their husbands. They connive to have children with Jacob and even offer their servant girls to him. Twenty years after leaving his home Jacob now has two wives, two maidservants who mothered some of his children, eleven sons and one daughter. (His last son, Benjamin, will be born after he returns to the place of his birth.)

God commands Jacob to leave and return to his home, but Laban attempts to squeeze even more years of work out of him. Jacob uses his knowledge of animal husbandry to trick Laban and accumulates large herds of animals. As if all of this was not enough, Rachel steals from her father as the family sneaks away from Laban to return to Beersheba, where Jacob had come from. An angry Laban follows, and Laban and Jacob finally come to separate and make a kind of treaty. Laban returns to Haran, and Jacob’s family continues with him back to meet with Jacob’s brother, Esau.

3. Jacob Makes Peace with His Brother:

(Genesis 32:1-33:11) Knowing he had previously treated his brother terribly, Jacob now carefully plans all sorts of appeasements leading up to meeting Esau again. He sends gifts and a request to be reunited. It appears he is willing to use his family as a cushion for his own protection. Jacob sends his wives, concubines and children on ahead to Esau while he stays behind.

In this short time when Jacob is alone, he encounters God again. In the night, he wrestles with someone referred to by various designations, such as an angel, a man and even God himself. At this time, Jacob’s name is changed to “Israel” because, as the angel said, “You have struggled with God and with men and have overcome.” This is the more familiar name when we think of the “Nation of Israel” and the “12 Sons or Tribes of Israel”.

When Jacob and Esau finally meet up the next day, Esau welcomes Jacob with open arms.

4. Jacob’s Family Makes Their Home in the Land of Canaan:

(Genesis 33:12-20) Jacob was still careful not to settle too close to his brother. He made his home in the land of Canaan in a place called Shechem. Eventually, God would renew his promise to Jacob and tell him to remain in Canaan but settle in Bethel, the place where Jacob had had the staircase dream. (Genesis 35:1-15).

Way to Introduce the Story:

Have a number of different types of pillows and let the children vote on which is the most comfortable one to sleep on. Be sure and include a large stone among the choices. Discuss the comforts and discomforts of each choice. “Remember how Jacob tricked his father and brother in last week’s story? Jacob’s parents sent him on a trip to see his relatives in Haran. They wanted him to find a wife there. On the first night of the journey, Jacob slept out in the open. He used a stone for his pillow. After all of the bad things that Jacob did, he was about to learn some good lessons from the Lord.”

The Story:

Jacob had tricked his father and brother. His brother was so angry he wanted to kill him. Jacob’s mother told him to leave and go to their family in Haran. He could find a wife there, and someday, when his brother was no longer angry, maybe he could come back.

Jacob stopped for the night on his way to Haran. He slept on the ground. For a pillow, he laid his head on a stone.

When you sleep, do you ever dream? Sometimes we have good dreams, and sometimes we have scary dreams. But Jacob had a beautiful dream. He dreamed that a stairway or ladder reached from the ground all the way into heaven! And on that long stairway, he saw angels going up and down! And who do you think was at the top of the ladder? God!

Jacob heard God say, “I am the God of your grandfather Abraham and your father Isaac. The ground you are lying on is yours. I will give it to you and your children and your children’s children. You will be the father of a great nation. There will be many children and they will populate this land.” God also promised to be with Jacob’s family and protect them.

The next morning Jacob got up very early and placed the stone on which he’d been sleeping onto its side. He poured olive oil on it and named the special place Bethel. He prayed, “Oh God if you protect me and give me food and shelter on this journey, I will always remember you as the true God. This place will be a special place of remembrance.”

Jacob now knew that God wanted him to be good. He would be the leader of a very big family. Someone from his family would bring blessings to the whole world. He knew he was not alone—God was with him.

When Jacob finally arrived in Haran, all his relatives were happy to see him. Jacob met his Uncle Laban’s beautiful daughter, Rachel, and her older sister, Leah. Rachel was beautiful.

Jacob worked hard helping Laban tend his sheep. After he had been there a month, Laban wanted to know how much he should pay Jacob. Jacob had fallen in love with Rachel, so he had an idea. He told Laban that he would work for him for seven whole years, and at the end of that time, Laban could give Rachel to Jacob as a wife. Laban agreed.

After seven years, the time came for Jacob and Rachel to get married. Do you remember how Jacob had been deceitful and played a trick on his father, Isaac? Now Jacob was the one that was tricked! Jacob thought he was marrying Rachel, but Laban switched the brides. Instead of Rachel, Laban gave his older daughter, Leah, to Jacob. Jacob could not see Leah, so he thought he was marrying Rachel. The next morning, when the sun came up, Jacob saw that his new wife was Leah!

Jacob was very angry with Laban, but Laban said it was unfair for the younger sister to marry before the older one. Then Laban had an idea. He would let Jacob marry Rachel too. Men in those days sometimes had more than one wife. Laban said that Jacob could marry Rachel now, but he would have to work another seven years in exchange. Jacob agreed.

Rachel and Jacob got married, and Jacob always loved Rachel the most. As the years went by, Jacob's family grew. Leah had a number of children, but many years passed before Rachel finally had children.

Eventually, Jacob became the father of twelve sons and one daughter. He did not always obey God. Some of the children were born to his wives, and some were born to his wives' servants.

Laban did not like it when Jacob said God wanted him to take his family and return to where he had come from. Jacob agreed to stay and work for a few more years. Jacob only had a few sheep, but he tricked Laban and made sure he had many sheep before leaving. God told Jacob it was time to go. Laban was angry, but Jacob and his family left anyway.

Before Jacob arrived at his old home, he had a visit from God (in the form of an angel). The angel wrestled with Jacob. The angel told Jacob that he was a fighter, so his name would no longer be "Jacob" but would be changed to a new name that suits a fighter. His new name would be called "Israel."

Jacob was very afraid to meet his brother Esau again. Esau had been very angry with him all those years ago. Jacob sent servants ahead of him with many gifts for Esau. Jacob even bowed down to Esau when he saw him.

But Jacob did not need to be worried. Esau ran up to his brother and hugged him. He was so happy to see Jacob.

Jacob and his family now made their home in nearby Shechem.

Back when Jacob had a dream about the staircase, God had told him that he would watch over him. Sometimes good things happened in Jacob's life, and sometimes bad things happened. Every time, in good and bad, God kept his promise and cared for Jacob.

God took care of Jacob, and God can take care of you.

Learning Activities and Crafts:

\(How to choose the best learning activities for my teaching situation\)

Activities:

- Create an obstacle course and have the children travel as Jacob did. You could use masking tape on the floor or use furniture and other obstacles. Include items to represent the journey. Use your own imagination, but you might include the following:
  - Home-tent, angry brother picture
  - Bethel- stones and a ladder
  - Haran-wedding, sheep, etc
  - A place where Jacob wrestles pillows for sleeping, angel halo
  - A place for a reunion with Esau-“Welcome Home” sign and/or celebration balloons and decorations.
  - Shechem-“Home Sweet Home” sign
- Jacob's Dream Activities:
  - Set up a ladder in the room and have the children draw or make angels and place them on the steps.
  - Walk outside and let the children find a stone that they think would be a comfortable pillow. Use a paper or real rock for the children to lay their heads on while listening to the story.
  - Encourage children to share some of the dreams they have had.
- Interview: Put a towel, sheet, or piece of cloth on the head of one of the students and let them represent Jacob. Conduct the class like an interview and let the children ask Jacob questions.
- Game to Play: One child covers his or her head and face with a white cloth or bridal veil (like Leah), and the groom has to guess who it is.
- Discussion: Children share about bad things that have happened in their lives and then what lessons they have learned from them. Adults should never provide glib answers to children's genuine hurts. Remember, sometimes the lesson is “God loves me and understands me”. Romans 8:28 is a good verse to guide the discussion.
- Maze to print. “Help Unite Jacob and Esau”. Difficult Medium Easy

Crafts:

- Paint rocks.
- Make angels for a craft project.

- Have children make puppets and perform a show to retell the story.
- Print bookmarks, trading cards or timelines (printable pages).
- Visit the Teaching Ideas page for additional activities and crafts.
